VIET REPORT - January 1966

Declaration of War

p.20 A presidential election can never constitute a declaration of war. If it could, the irony of 1964 would be horrendouse In 1964 the overwhelming majority of Americans voted against the man who advocated bombing installations, and they voted for the man who said (on September 28th): "We are not going North and we are not going South," the man who refused (on August 12th) "to supply American boys to do the job that Asian boys should do."

Declaratinn of War

p.20 A presidential election can never constitute a declaration of war. If it could, the irony of 1964 would be horrendouse In 1964 the overwhelming majority of Americans voted against the man who advocated bombing installations, and they voted for the man who said (on September 28th): "We are not going North and we are not going South," the man who refused (on August 12th) "to supply American boys to do the job that Asian boys should do."